

DEMOCRATS PRESENT THEIR PLATFORM TO PRES. ROOSEVELT

Plan to Keep Agriculture,
Labor, Business, Youth On
"Road to Prosperity"

TREND IS INDICATED

Two Planks Drawn to Capture Votes of Agriculture and Organized Labor

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—President Roosevelt was presented today by the Democratic National Convention with a platform promising to keep agriculture, labor, business and youth on the "road to freedom and prosperity."

The two planks in the platform were drawn to capture the votes of American agriculture and organized labor, indicating the trend of the Democratic campaign next fall.

There was one bid in it to win the support of Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho. This was a specific promise in its anti-monopoly plank to restore the anti-trust laws wherever weakened by judicial decisions.

Three high points in the platform, aside from the strong farm labor and anti-monopoly planks, were a declaration for payment of prevailing wages on relief projects, elimination of the gold from the monetary plank, and a promise to seek a constitutional amendment for Federal and State solution of drought, dust storms, flood, minimum wage, maximum hours, child labor and working conditions in industry, and the control of monopoly, if this can not be done under the present constitution. The decision to resort to a constitutional amendment on the labor and other problem was regarded as a victory for Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, who came here fighting for such a plank.

They were silent about payment of the World War Adjusted Service (Bonus) certificates, the League of Nations, the World Court and collection of America's international debts.

Sudden Death Occurs Here For Mrs. Ellen Dougherty

Sudden death claimed a resident of Buckley street, last evening, in the person of Mrs. Ellen Dougherty, wife of William K. Dougherty. She had not complained of feeling ill, and had carried out her usual duties about the household yesterday. Death is said to be due to an attack of apoplexy.

The late resident of Bristol, who came to the United States from her native Ireland, when a young woman, had made her home here since that time. She leaves her husband; one son, William C. Dougherty; four daughters, Mrs. Hannah Mullen, Miss Margaret Dougherty, Mrs. Andrew Rafferty, Bristol; Mrs. James Cavanaugh, Florence, N. J.; a brother, Daniel Dugan, Jr., Buckley street; her father, Daniel Dugan, Sr., Ireland; and four grandchildren. Brothers and sisters, who reside in Ireland, likewise survive.

The funeral will be held on Monday morning, from the late residence of the deceased, 214 Buckley street, with solemn high mass of requiem at 10 o'clock in St. Mark's Church. Interment will be made in St. Mark's Cemetery.

YARDLEY

WPA Will Sponsor Three Playgrounds in Section

Sponsored by the Works Progress Administration, three play-grounds will open in this area on Monday, designed to provide supervised play for both children and adults.

The play-grounds will be located at the Bristol high school field, Leedom's field, and at Croydon. The hours will be: high school, one to five p. m.; Leedom's field, 10 a. m. to 12 noon, and one to six p. m.; Croydon, two to five p. m. The playgrounds will be operated daily, except Saturday and Sunday, during July and August.

Swimming instruction is also to be given to the children, the period being for 1½ hours. The place and time for such will be made known later. Softball leagues for adults are likewise being considered.

The playgrounds will be in charge of Michael DeRisi; his assistants being: Misses Dora Thompson and Anna May Tosti; and Messrs. Ernest Orazi, John Rich and John Thayer.

NAME TWO NEW TEACHERS AT DOYLESTOWN SCHOOLS

Vacancy Created in Senior
High School; Also Choose
Coach for Teams

CRESSMAN ANNOUNCES

DOYLESTOWN, June 26—Dr. George R. Cressman, supervising principal of Doylestown public schools, announces the selection of two new members of the faculty for the local schools.

To fill the vacancy in the senior high school the school board has elected Donald S. Wright, of State College. Mr. Wright was graduated from State College with the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1933 and a year later received a degree of Master of Science from the same institution.

While an undergraduate at State College he placed first in the celebrated Carnegie Psychology examinations and was active in Y. M. C. A. activities.

He is interested in photography and has been connected with broadcasting in the capacity of an announcer from station WPSG.

For the past two years he was head of the science department of Connelville High School.

While working for his master's degree Mr. Wright was graduate assistant in chemistry at State College. A graduate of Edinboro State Teachers' College, William D. Zahniser, who makes his home in Edinboro, has been elected by the board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of R. Lloyd Jones.

He was graduated from the teachers' college, which now has as its president Dr. Carmon Ross, formerly supervising principal of the local schools, in 1933, with a degree of Bachelor of Science.

Mr. Zahniser is taking graduate work at State College this Summer and will attend the coaching school.

When he assumes his duties here in the Fall he will assist in coaching football and be in charge of basketball and baseball in the junior high school. He has had three years of teaching experience in high schools in the northern part of the State.

SLIGHT BLAZE

Fire this morning damaged the corner of the roof of the property, 153 Buckley street, owned by Joseph Wollard. It is presumed that the blaze was due to sparks from a chimney. The Bristol Consolidated Department was called and extinguished the blaze.

CHOIR SOCIAL

The choir of St. James's P. E. Church held a party in the parish house last evening. During the evening games were played and prizes won by Violet Burtonwood, Anne Ritter, Elizabeth Bellerby and George Bailey. Ice cream and cookies were served.

Uses 1912 Ticket To Get Into Convention

(By "The Stroller")

You have a hard time getting ahead of Chauncey E. Stoneback, Sr.

Wednesday night a messenger delivered a ticket to Chauncey for the fifth session of the Democratic convention in Philadelphia. Yesterday afternoon the Bristol Democrat journeyed to Philadelphia and went to Convention Hall and presented the ticket.

"Why that session is over," said the door man.

But Chauncey was prepared with an answer, as he usually is.

Digging down into his pocket, Chauncey pulled out his alternate ticket which he had for the Democratic convention held in Baltimore in 1912. He showed this to the door man and was admitted without any further questioning.

"Before I left Bristol I put the badge I received when I attended the St. Louis convention in 1916 and also this alternate ticket I had at Baltimore. I just thought that I might have occasion to use them," said Chauncey. And he did.

THE HOUSEWIFE PAYS

(New York American, June 25, 1936)

The ordinary man and his wife refuse to worry about taxes because they do not believe they pay any. Comparatively few people are required to file State or Federal income tax returns, and still fewer pay an actual tax on incomes.

But when these people THINK they are escaping taxation, they are emulating the ostrich with their heads in the sand.

Taxes, as we have come to know them, are big figures. When Congress discusses a tax bill, it talks of millions and billions of dollars. It takes box-car numerals to describe taxes because the cost of government has run into multiple ciphers. These big figures go right over the head of the ordinary citizen, like a thunder cloud over an ant hill.

This housewife's big job is to stretch the week's pay over seven days. She has to feed and clothe her family, pay rent, buy fuel, electricity, gas and water. It is a job in which every nickel counts.

The housewife does not realize she is just as busy being a taxpayer as she is being a housewife. She does not know that with every purchase she has made during a day's shopping she has paid perhaps dozens of taxes. If she bought a jar of jam for her children, for instance, she paid many separate taxes.

How many taxes did YOU pay today? It all depends on how many things you bought. If you bought flour, or beans, or bread, you paid taxes in every case. There are hidden taxes figured into the price of that pair of shoes you got for the youngster.

So YOU ARE a taxpayer, Mrs. Housewife. Those millions and billions you read about are the totals of the pennies you and all the other American housewives and wage earners hand over every day to the merchants who sell you the things your family cannot get along without; and the tax collector takes the pennies and dollars from the merchants.

This is the way the cost of government, with all the billions it involves, trickles down to YOUR FAMILY. The people who spend the taxes are glad to have you keep on thinking you do not pay taxes.

HIBERNIANS SET MARK FOR CONSECUTIVE WINS

Break Twilight League Record
By Winning 14 Consecutive Games

FIRST-HALF CHAMPIONS

The Hibernians broke the Bristol Twilight League record for consecutive victories when they won their 14th straight game last night on Leedom's field. The old record was 13, made by the Caseys last season. By virtue of their triumph, the Hibs won the first half with 15 victories and a lone defeat. The Odd Fellows were the victims last night, with the final count being 2-1.

Two runs in the first inning gave the Corson Streeters the win. The tallies were made off "Jake" Prael, who settled down to pitch a brilliant game of ball, fanning nine Hibernian batsmen. The winning twirler was LeRoy Devlin. Devlin's fast ball had the Oddies completely baffled, but his wildness kept putting runners on base and always had him in hot water. Several times he escaped unscathed miraculously.

The Hibs' two tallies were registered in the first. After Thompson grounded out to short, Eastlack singled to right and stole second. Joe Roe hit to Dean who fumbled, Eastlack reaching third and Roe second. Both runners crossed the plate when Hemp hit a single to left.

The Oddies made their run in the last half of the second. With one gone, Leo Hibbs singled to center and crossed the plate when Freddie Hibbs socked a long double between right and center. After Dean fled out, Davis singled, Hibbs stopping at third. Davis went out trying for second.

Johnny Hemp led the hitters by getting three singles. For the losers, Freddie and Leo Hibbs had a single and double each.

Affair Aids Class In Raising Christmas Funds

The Sunday School class of Bristol Methodist Church, taught by Mrs. William Mohr, held a covered dish social in the church basement last evening.

The affair was given to raise money toward the annual Christmas party which members of the class give to needy children of Bristol. About 50 people attended, and a delicious menu was served.

AL SMITH OUTBURST HALTS CONVENTION; FIGHT IS STARTED WHEN BANNERS DISRUPT THE SESSION; STIR CLASHES IN HALL

Incident Comes Just in Time to Completely Rout a Promising Demonstration for Roosevelt and Garner on the Part of Young Democrats of America

PHILADELPHIA, June 26—Fist fights broke out in the galleries during the Democratic National Convention last night when banners bearing the slogan "Al Smith Democrats" made their appearance.

The display came while the Young Democrats of America were parading the aisles in a demonstration for President Roosevelt.

A great hoo was yelled at the demonstrators by the delegates, alternates and spectators. Undaunted, the "Smith supporters" waved their banners and cheered.

Young men in the adjacent seats sprang at the banner-wavers. A great cheer, "Put them out," rang throughout the auditorium.

A score of policemen battled their way through and joined in the melee. The powerful cops parted the battling groups and beat back the Al Smith proponents to the uppermost corners of the gallery. One young man was knocked unconscious and was carried out by the police. The "Al Smith" demonstrators were herded together by the police and escorted down a stairway out of the building.

Two Killed

Wilmington, Del., June 26—Two persons were killed and two others injured seriously today when their automobile crashed into a train on the outskirts of this city. The dead were Virginia Boyce, 19, and William Cahall, Jr., 22, both of Wilmington. The injured were James Cornell, 23, and Donald Carmichael, 23, also of this city.

Wild Excitement in Paris

Paris, June 26—Scenes of wildest excitement were enacted in the Chamber of Deputies today when Parliament debated the paralyzing shipping strike at Marseilles, while there were fears of a police walk-out in Paris.

Right and left deputies shouted one another down as Conservatives bitterly attacked the rise of Red fever following installation of Leon Blum's Socialist government, while Communists blamed the present industrial walk-out of "gangster influence."

Most impassioned of the speakers was Henri Pomard, a right deputy, who said: "Steps must be taken to prevent French blood from running in the streets. We have seen a tri-color with the hammer and sickle of Soviet Russia fixed to it. Veterans of the war are not prepared to see the flag of France thus profaned."

Danger of police striking, with rioting, hangs over Paris today.

STATE EMPLOYEES TOLD TO BUY TICKETS

Each One Asked To Take First
Five Tickets at $1
Each

MAY SELL FOUR OF THEM

HARRISBURG, June 26—After a brief rest from New Deal raids upon their pay checks, Capitol Hill job-holders once again are feeling the dull thud of the Guffey-Earle-Lawrence black-jack upon their defenseless heads. The new macing activities are being carried on in the name of party patriotism and while the older statesmen of the plunderbund are in attendance at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia.

Department heads, under instruction from the high command in Philadelphia, are passing out tickets to their employees for admission to the various "notification ceremonies" on Saturday. Each employee is compelled to take five tickets at one dollar apiece. He can retain one ticket, if so inclined, and is expected to sell the remainder. The one dollar charge is to pay for the privilege of listening in on the radio speech of President Roosevelt when he accepts the nomination Saturday at Franklin Field, Philadelphia.

Hardly had employees recovered from this fresh "sock" when they were again stunned by a demand from departmental heads to "come across" with an additional $32.50 for a copy of the official Democratic campaign book. Lackless job-holders who purchased a copy of the volume found a card enclosed which designated them as agents of the Guffey-Earle-Lawrence combine and made it compulsory for them to hawk additional books among their neighbors and friends.

The final right hand hook or "hay-maker" that has left the unfortunate job-holders gasping for breath is a demand that they purchase books containing ten stickers each costing fifty cents. The stickers are red, white and blue and bear a portrait of the President and the caption: "Ride with Roosevelt." They are designed to be attached to all letters mailed by those who purchase them.

WED AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, June 26—At the residence of the bride, the marriage of Miss Sarah P. Stradling, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Amos P. Stradling, Langhorne, and George Shively, Bustleton, occurred Saturday afternoon. The Rev. J. Carpenter Zook, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, Philadelphia, was the officiating clergyman. Attendants of the couple were Mrs. Alexander Millikin, sister of the bride; and Lawrence McCloy, Bustleton.

EXONERATE DRIVER OF AUTO CAUSING DEATH OF CHILD

Free James Roach, Somerton;
Accident Found To Be
"Unavoidable"

INQUEST YESTERDAY

Victim Was Elaine Vandegrift, Aged Seven, of Eddington

At a coroner's inquest yesterday afternoon, conducted into the death of Elaine Vandegrift, 7, Street Road, Eddington, the driver of the automobile striking the child was exonerated of all blame.

The operator of the car in the accident, which was unavoidable according to the returns of the coroner's jury, was James J. Roach, 70, of Somerton.

A number of witnesses testified yesterday at the inquisition, conducted by the Bucks county coroner, Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, in the municipal building.

The first witness to take the stand was Corporal R. D. Evans, of the State Highway Patrol, who gave the report of Patrolman Butcavage, who investigated the case. The officer reviewed the case, telling of the Vandegrift child being struck by a sedan operated by Roach, after she had been lifted down from the truck of Harry Hayworth, Croydon, after being given a "lift," and of how she darted across the roadway to her home. The report told of the driver of the sedan taking the child to Harriman Hospital where she died a short time later.

Dr. James Lawler, deputy coroner, told of being summoned to Harriman Hospital, to view the body following death. He stated that his examination showed the girl had died of contusions, abrasions, and internal injuries.

The third witness was Harry Hayworth, driver of the truck, who had given Elaine and others walking with her a ride toward their homes. Hayworth stated that he was an eye-witness to the accident. He informed the jury that he and his son Patrick halted the truck and offered a ride to Mrs. Virginia Mellor, her small child, and her niece, and the Vandegrift girl. His testimony showed that when the truck was stopped near the Vandegrift home, Hayworth lifted the Vandegrift child from the truck. "As I went to lift the other little girl down I saw the Vandegrift child running. She ran up to the front of my truck, and then on an angle. She was about 30 feet ahead of the truck when struck," Hayworth testified the sedan operated by Roach was traveling slowly and was brought quickly to a stop. Patrick Hayworth then took the stand, telling of seeing the fatal accident. He estimated the speed of the sedan at 15 or 20 miles per hour, and stated there was no other traffic.

Called to the witness chair, Charles Dyer, Croydon, told of being on the porch of a house opposite. He recounted how the party alighted from the truck. "I heard a horn blow, and saw the sedan pull around the truck. I 'hollered,' but as the driver of the sedan started to 'right' his car to get it back on the right side of the road again, he hit the child, and she rolled under the machine. . . . He stopped his car immediately; he seemed to have it under control," he told of young Hayworth and Roach leaving for the hospital with the child.

Mrs. Mellor told that she did not actually see the accident, as she was busy getting down from the truck. "I saw the child under the car," A neighbor, Mrs. Mary Burkhalter, Street Road and Taylor avenue, stated that she heard some man shout from the roadway, "Hold on a minute." She told of seeing the parked truck, and of the sedan coming from the same direction, slowly. "I saw Elaine running, and she ran diagonally, across and up the road. I thought the driver was coming so slow that he would stop, or give her an opportunity to get out of the way. Then the hedge hindered my view. I heard a sound as he struck her. . . . I think he is old and thinks slowly."

The defendant, Mr. Roach, stated that he is 70 years of age. He told that he was traveling very slowly over Street Road, mentioning that he saw the parked truck, and saw the child. "But I couldn't stop. I saw her running but I think she ran into the side of my car." He testified that his brakes

FOR FREE USE OF MONEY

And now appears on the horizon one more first magnitude star heralded as pointing the way to believers to attain prosperity "beyond our wildest dreams." Ernest Stout, Chicago attorney, is the self-constituted prophet of the new vision, and his organization for attaining it he calls the "American Business Banking Association."

The formula is quite as simple as that evolved by Dr. Francis Townsend. It would permit business men "to withdraw money from the United States Treasury for free use without interest or any charge, save for the cost of printing, to be kept for use until the withdrawer desires to return it, even for 20 years or longer."

Stout says that he has been attorney for two banks and has made long study of banking laws. He is to be general counsel for the "Ernest Stout plan for the free use of money," and he has a petition to Congress to which he expects to get "millions of signers." The dues to belong to the organization will "not exceed 50 cents a month."

And if the millions of petitioners should persuade Congress to legalize the scheme, what would the Supreme Court say? Stout has fixed that, too. The proposed act will contain this clause:

"If any court seek to impede, obstruct or diminish the effect of this law, it will automatically be charged with misdemeanor and be subject to impeachment and trial before the Senate of the United States."

Recent history seems to indicate that Stout will find plenty of signers to his petition at 50 cents a month.

GET UNDERSTANDING

A long time ago a keen observer of the needs of mankind wrote, "With all thy getting, get understanding." We have not learned yet the right use of that proverb.

The "back to nature" movement seems to have had its influence in nearly every phase of life except care of the health. A writer says: "If 60 per cent of all the people apply to the physician or the drug store for help in overcoming some complaint, usually based on fatigue, then it must be evident that normal living is unusual."

In proof of this further, the same writer says that the commonest causes of ill health among the young are an unvaried diet, too many cigarettes, too much social stimulation and a considerable lack in valuable fields of discipline and work.

In other words, modern society is failing to teach children how to take care of themselves. The getting back to the wrong direction. Through example and teaching young people are impressed with the conviction that life must be speeded up, and are not rightly taught that the mind and body, like the automobile, if driven at high speed, need special care.

Home and school will do well to give more attention to this elemental teaching.

Farley would have every Democrat pay a dollar to hear the President over the radio. As the Democrat gets nothing for listening to Farley, we are against this.

A teacher isn't an old maid until she makes the kids suffer by reading their intercepted love notes at the school.

SYNOPSIS

Try as she might, Lynn Bartel, young mannequin at Dunning's, could not be intimate with the girls at the shop. It was not that she acted superior, but her innate good breeding and aristocratic air placed her on a higher social level than the others. Lynn's mother had been a southern society belle, but she sacrificed wealth and position to marry John Bartel and go to Chicago with him. Following his death, Marion Bartel preferred to struggle along in a meagre circumstances rather than return to her family. It was Mrs. Bartel's desire that Lynn have the best training and background possible so, despite financial straits, she sent her to the exclusive Merwin Heath School. Lynn had no friends for she could not invite her school mates to the simple room she shared with her mother at Mrs. Kime's boarding house, and Mrs. Bartel never permitted her to associate with girls she met elsewhere. Mrs. Bartel planned great things for her daughter but she died while the girl was still at school. Lynn left school and went to work. She returns home one night to find a letter from her wealthy and pampered cousin, "Doti" Merchon, waiting for her.

CHAPTER III

Lynn slit the envelope and drew out the folded sheet of engraved and crested note paper with fingers that were stiff and cold. But the brief message seemed to bring with its gay words some of the balmy warmth of the southland. The girls' mothers had continued an erratic correspondence through their years of separation, which the cousins had assumed during the past year of their acquaintance.

The letter surprised Lynn. Doti was tremendously excited over the approaching Mardi Gras festival when, she confided to Lynn, she was to be chosen queen of the carnival. Her father had told her she might have anything she wished, heaping joy upon honor, and she wished for nothing so much as to have Lynn for her guest at Mardi Gras. It wouldn't cost her—Lynn—a penny, and she must not refuse. Doti always had what she wanted, expected it from everyone.

Lynn sank back into her deep chair, frayed and bulging at the arms, and tried to assemble her thoughts. For a whole year, her days had been so routine and almost dull, that this sudden prospect dazzled her a little. It gave her a pleasant warm feeling of belonging to someone, to know that Doti "wanted her for her guest."

But its inferences disturbed her. It had been so very long since she was really gay and carefree, she wondered what it would be like to have a whole week of mad celebration. She never had seen the Mardi Gras, but she could imagine something of its splendor and abandon. And to be the guest of this queen! At any time, Doti's home and Doti's life were glamorous enough—but to share such a climax in her experience as this would be a rare privilege, indeed.

But of course she could not go! Lynn emerged from her dreaming and hastened to prepare for supper. Mrs. Kime never would serve the meal until she was downstairs. Which fact added to her responsibility not to keep the others waiting. How often are privileges and favors like that—to become burdens rather than blessings, for conscientious folk.

While she washed her hands and smoothed her hair, Lynn's mind continued to convince her that she could not accept Doti's invitation. For one thing, she could not leave her work to go south for a week, as if she were an industrial executive. Besides, she hadn't the clothes for such an occasion. And she was not familiar with the life of the Merchon ménage. Having lived all her life in a very ordinary home with only such refinements as were traditional, like wisps of dried brown leaves clinging to the bare branches of a tree, Lynn felt awed and timid at the prospect of living in that southern mansion.

Although she never had seen it, she could imagine every magnificent detail of it. Ever since she had been old enough to listen to stories, she had heard fairy-like tales of its enchanting splendor and the delightful living it sheltered. She knew now that those stories had not been fairy tales, however, but the wistful memories of her mother's childhood and youth.

She knew now that the handsome prince who had entered the great white house surrounded by bearded in spite of her father's angry protests, had been her own charming father whom she could remember only vaguely. And her fondest dream, ever since she had known that the place was not a fantasy, had been to visit there some day. But the dream—like all dreams—had not dared to assume real and definite form, and it had beckoned on her horizon like a mirage. Tonight, for a moment, it had grown tantalizingly real, but she dismissed it resolutely. She knew that there must be a longer and more arduous journey before she reached that happy oasis.

Lynn hurried downstairs to join her fellow boarders. Her eyes were even more luminous than usual with the excitement created by Doti's letter. Mrs. Kime noted her pleasure, instantly, and was grateful that knew each other as well as any group of persons ever does, and conversed together as good friends during the progress of the one meal they shared. They all treated Lynn as if she were a little girl for whom each of them was responsible. She was the youngest of them, and the most alone.

Even Miss Allerton, with her prudish and erudite manner and thin sharp nose surmounted by prominent Oxford spectacles, had more intimate friends than Lynn could boast. But of course, she should have achieved something for teaching in the same school twenty years and living in the same place for almost a decade—if permanence means anything. On Friday evenings, she went out somewhere with "the girls" on gay spinsterial excursions; and Sunday morning

"Oh, I don't mind the cold," Lynn denied with the exuberance of youth.

Lynn's letter had not been depressing. The poor child was so lonely and yet so patient with her drab surroundings.

Mrs. Kime's was not an ordinary boarding house. She called it a "family residence." The house had been her private home in more prosperous years, and she was very particular who shared it with her now. Mr. and Mrs. Petri occupied the parlor of the front hall. Mr. Petri was a violin artist whose talent was not appreciated as it should have been, so that Mrs. Petri augmented their income by working in an insurance office.

Miss Allerton was a teacher of mathematics in the nearest high school, and appreciated the quiet refinement of the second floor front room. Lynn occupied the next room and Mrs. Kime herself used the rear bedroom. On the third floor were two rooms which served as shop and living quarters for the Diegal brothers who built radios for private customers and conducted strange experiments in the mysterious realms of ether, sound and electricity. Sometimes, eerie noises penetrated to the lower floors of the majestic old house, but they were not so frequent as to be obnoxious; and the bachelor brothers, Harry and Vance, were most desirable tenants. They were bald and ruddy-faced and ventured a sly facetious humor when they were not too absorbed with technical problems. On the whole, it was a reserved and wholesome group which lived beneath the high mansard roof with the carved scroll decorations spiraling down the edges of its gables.

Mrs. Kime always presided at the dinner table, like a gracious hostess serving her guests, and there was no doubt that the atmosphere was superior to the usual establishment of its kind. Sometimes, Lynn thought about sharing her room with another girl, for her companionship and financial advantages; but she had discovered no eligible person and rather enjoyed her privacy which the careful management of her salary permitted. The other roomers had been there before Lynn and her mother arrived, so that they was re-elected as president, and the following officers were also chosen for the ensuing year: Vice-president, Mrs. Edwin W. Henry, Sr.; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Wessaw; assistant treasurer, Miss Grace H. Illick; secretary, Mrs. Davis; pianist, Mrs. T. William Smith. The topic of the evening, "Health and Medical Temperance," was in charge of Mrs. Eli Peck. Miss Illick conducted the devotional period. The July business session will occur at the residence of Mrs. George Hibbs, near Midway.

Owing to the inclement weather of Tuesday, the Methodist Ladies' Aid held its picnic in Henry's hall, instead of at Neely's Mill, Washington Crossing Park. A general social time ensued, and a picnic lunch was enjoyed.

Robert Corrigan is passing several days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Corrigan, Sr., Philadelphia. Miss Gertrude S. Johnson, a former resident here, now a member of the Doylestown public school faculty, will spend her vacation abroad.

EDGELY

Miss Nellie Glerum's Sunday School class is planning to repeat the three-act play, "A Southern Cinderella," at the Christian Church, Tullytown, which it presented so well at the Union Chapel, a few weeks ago. The girls who take part are: Mary Robinson, who plays the part of Madame Charleris, an old aristocrat; Lillian Reynolds, as Enid Bellamy; a Southern Cinderella, Gretchen Evans; Rosie Winterberry, a famous settlement worker; Helen DeWitte as Miss Johnnie Bell Randolph, a little coquette; Grace Weller, as Katherine Hawke, an English miss; Aline Wright as Caroline Hawke, her sister, an adventuress, and Doris Kerr, as Mammy Judy Johnson, a black blue grass widow. The girls met at the home of Miss Aline Wright, Monday, to practice. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Walter Scott was hostess to the Edgely card club last week, high score going to Mrs. Harold Bergmann; second high, Mrs. Rohn. Refreshments were served.

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—These Changing Scenes—After a week, the snow storm still raged on the "I Won't Dance" set. But, since Helen Broderick started to work in the picture, the wisecracks flew faster than the flakes.

Helen Broderick

Miss Broderick is a comedienne who even makes the actors laugh on the set.

She is blonde and very young, looking to be the mother of a grown son. And what a clown! I come upon her perched upon a stool and training a pair of field glasses on Ginger Rogers and the darkly handsome Georges Metaxa, who are rehearsing a love song in a glassed-in sun veranda about 15 feet away.

The crew are all pointing to the glasses and laughing. "Listen," she says, "if you had as little fun in life as I do, you'd be up here with these glasses, too." I ask her if it's true that her son, Broderick Crawford, and Lucille Ball are to be married.

She looks at me with undiminished good humor. "Maybe you know more than I do," she says. "I told him, if he'd like to sleep out under the trees, to go ahead and get married. I am going to give them two army cots and a pair of blankets for a wedding present."

The minute I arrive on "The Good Earth" set, things begin to happen. It isn't often so, and I'm so surprised I have to make a dash for the camera parallel to escape being run down by a charging troop of Chinese cavalymen or carried out into a square with a mob of looters. Director Sam Wood nods a greeting and turns back to the scene, which is the movies at their exciting best.

The square, supposed to be Peking although the film won't say so, is a milling mass of mounted soldiers and scampering rabble. About 400 Chinese extras are out there and it looks as if some of them are sure to be injured in the melee.

Horses are rearing into the air with their pawing hoofs just above the heads of the crowd. Men are hacking at each other with swords and sticks.

They are going at it with such a will that Wood has to yell several times into the loud speaker system to stop the battle.

"Aren't you afraid the horses will trample people?" I ask him. "No," he replies, "The horses know enough not to step on anybody. It's the men you have to worry about."

It never ceases to intrigue, how actors turn on and off emotions. I watch Director Lew King film a tense scene for the picture, "Cave-In".

On the far end of the Warner Brothers back lot, they have built the entrance to a mine shaft. As I come up, a score of men are crowded around it. An elevator comes to the surface. The foreman steps out, is immediately surrounded. Fellow miners are trapped below and more rescue workers are needed.

Jean Muir frantically pushes her way through the crowd. She demands to know where her sweetheart is. "He's down below directing the rescue party," the foreman tells her.

"I knew it!" she cries, and then her voice is lost in the noise of the others. A moment later, Director King calls "cut" and Jean saunters out of the group and over to an automobile to get a book.

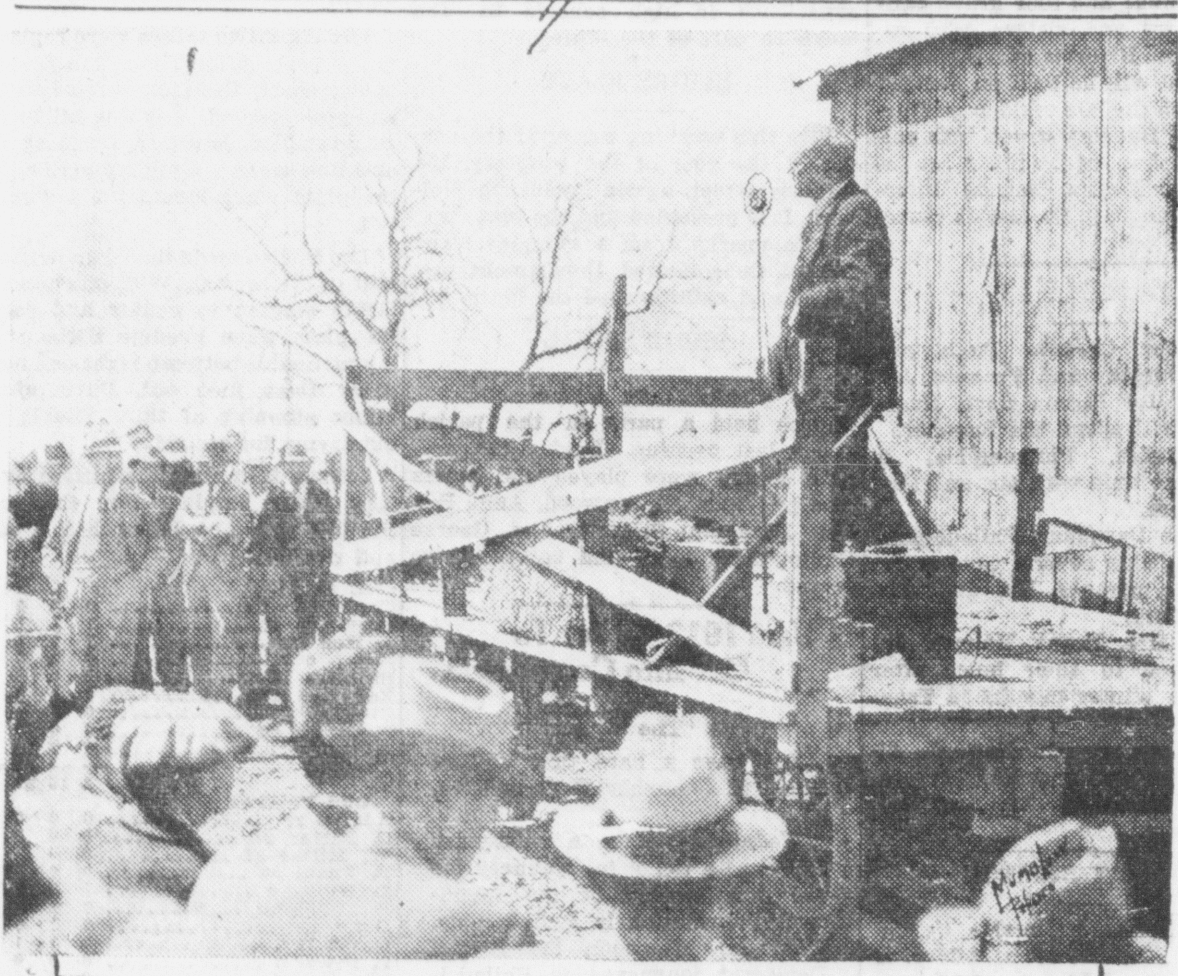

Between ordinary scenes, she tells me, she reads for relaxation. When something important is coming up, requiring concentration, she knits. Like Madame Defarge.

HOW LANDON MEETS "THE FOLKS"

The above pictures are illustrative of the manner in which Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, keeps the "human touch" in his dealings with his constituency.

In April of this year, in the midst of exacting official duties and of a ceaseless round of engagements incident to the campaign in his behalf as the possible Republican nominee for president, he slipped away from Topeka for a day to attend a rural sale at the Hollinger Stock Farm near Chapman, Kansas.

It was one of his rare vacations. It gave him a chance to be with "folks." The above pictures reveal him in characteristic vein as he mingled with the crowd.

The lower one shows the Governor standing on a hay rack, with a rude frame farm structure as a background, talking simply and appealingly to his Kansas audience. The upper one portrays him as he "went down the line" at the tables where an outdoor luncheon was served, helping himself to eatables as all the other guests did and exchanging pleasantries with the fine Central Kansas farm women who prepared the food.

Governor Landon's dominating strength as a candidate and as an executive of state affairs has always been grounded in the personal friendships he has formed and maintained. His personality is an attractive one; he is democratic, simple and sincere. He has an understanding sympathy with people and their problems. He can talk their own language without affectation. He has the ability to join a group of farmers, sit on his heels, whittle with them, discuss the conditions under which they labor and take counsel together for betterment. His hold on the common people of Kansas is that he is one of them—and that they know it. He could not fool them for a minute if there were anything false or "put on" in his character.

Governor Landon "gets along with folks." It is an outstanding trait. It is the chief reason why he has attained to leadership in the Middle West today, and why Republicans of the country turned to him to carry the party standard in the coming campaign.

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP

THERE'S MUSIC IN THE AIR

Col. Knox Is Energetic

Foe of Administration

Chicago, Ill.—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher nominated as Gov. Alf M. Landon's running mate on the Republican ticket in the November elections, is no exception to the unity of purpose which has characterized the Republican convention in Cleveland and the campaign itself.

Determined to campaign vigorously as a candidate for the vice-presidency, Col. Knox wired Gov. Landon: "I gladly place myself under your orders and will undertake to discharge every assignment you give me with all the vigor and ability I possess. We will go forward to victory."

Texas Tugwell Aid Quits

in Anger Over Spending

Amarillo, Texas.—Fed up with the ridiculous waste of public funds by the federal government, Ralph G. Bray resigned as publicity director for the Rural Resettlement administration in this territory. He said he acted in protest of Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell's "academy of bubble blowers" and "carnival of blundering and squandering."

Bray accused Tugwell of "exploiting the so-called dust bowl" for "cheap sentimentalism" and of using the resettlement administration "as a laboratory for Utopian policies." He said that "no tangible work has been done" in the four months the Amarillo office has been in operation.

"Bolshevism!" Says Jim Reed

Kansas City, Mo.—Asserting that he was not a delegate and would not attend the Democratic national convention, former Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri said: "Moreover, I don't want to abide by the actions of a convention that would not permit the expression of anti-administration views. Such a convention does not represent the Democratic party; it may be bolshevism, but it's not Democracy."

Harry Hopkins' Magic

Manassa, Colo.—The WPA plans to improve (if it can find) thirteen miles of streets here at a cost of $14,771 to the federal government. The town's population is 953.

Confident of Victory in November

Topeka, Kan.—"Win with Landon and Knox!" is the G. O. P. battle cry today, and from the appearance of the two Republican nominees, pictured on the steps of the Kansas capitol, it is easy to see that that is just what they intend to do. Gov. Alf M. Landon (left), presidential nominee, and Col. Frank Knox, nominated for vice president, are shown as they exchanged pleasantries and ideas preparatory to beginning their campaign.

Farley Fears Him

Already credited with having Jim Farley and his New Deal spellbinders on the defensive is young, red-headed John D. M. Hamilton, of Topeka, Kan., new chairman of the Republican National committee. He managed the campaign which won Landon the nomination unanimously.

G. O. P. Is United Behind Alf Landon

John Hamilton New National Chairman; Will Carry Fight to Enemy.

TOPEKA, KAN.—"We want to get an early start and carry the fight right into the enemy camp," said Gov. Alf M. Landon, shortly after his nomination as the Republican candidate for the presidency. And in a meeting which followed at the Kansas capital, party leaders gave him a free hand.

Acting in complete harmony, the same kind as that which characterized the G. O. P. convention, the new national committee chose John D. M. Hamilton of Topeka, Landon's young campaign manager, as the new chairman. He will administer the campaign from the Chicago headquarters, with Harrison E. Spangler, of Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Arthur M. Curtis of Missouri, and Charlton McVeagh of New York as his associates.

Fletcher Is General Counsel. Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, the retiring national chairman, was named general counsel of the committee and C. V. Goodspeed of Chicago treasurer. Vice chairmen are Ralph E. Williams of Oregon, J. Henry Roraback of Connecticut, Mrs. Lucy Hillman of Colorado and Mrs. Marjorie W. Scranton of Pennsylvania.

The following national committeemen and women were selected for the national executive committee: Robert P. Burroughs of New Hampshire, Joseph W. Martin, Massachusetts; Mrs. Paul FitzSimons, Rhode Island; Charles D. Hilles, New York; Walter S. Halloran, West Virginia; J. Will Taylor, Tennessee; George A. Ball, Indiana; Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa; John Wyeth, Missouri; Mrs. Horace H. Sayre, Oklahoma; Daniel E. Pomeroy, New York; Ezra R. Whitla, Idaho; Earl Warren, California; R. B. Cregar, Texas, and Mrs. Bertha Baur of Chicago.

Landon Trusts Common Sense. Behind the team of Landon and Knox the united party will conduct a vigorous campaign. Gov. Landon has said: "Let us put our trust in the courage and the common sense of the American people, in their love of liberty and of justice—never doubting their firm resolve to repossess themselves of their government under a leadership worthy to serve the cause of our beloved country."

Chairman Hamilton already claims 42 states for the Republican column in November.

U. S. 'Balance of Trade' Disappears First Time. Washington, D. C.—For three successive months American imports have exceeded exports. Never before February, 1936, had such a condition existed in the United States. And the total for the first four months of the year shows that we bought from foreign countries $14,500,000 worth more of goods than we sold abroad.

One of the chief reasons for this "unfavorable" balance of trade is the reciprocal trade agreement policy of the Roosevelt administration, which has opened up the American market, especially with respect to agricultural goods, to the foreigners.

The United States has signed reciprocal agreements with fourteen foreign countries; six of these went into effect during the first quarter of the year. The imports from these six countries increased $14,165,000, or 32.2 per cent for the first quarter of 1936 over the same period of 1935. Imports from all foreign countries increased only 16.8 per cent.

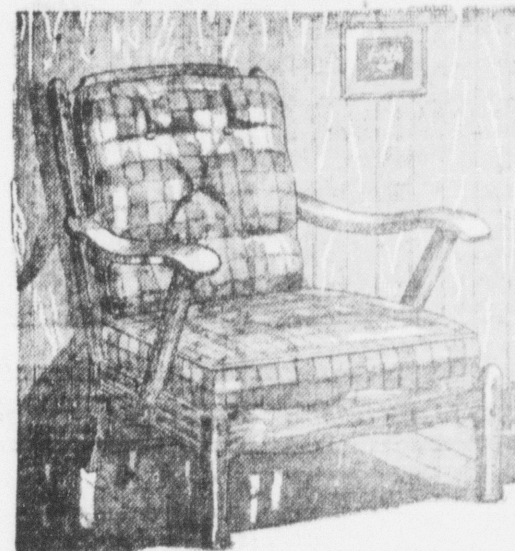

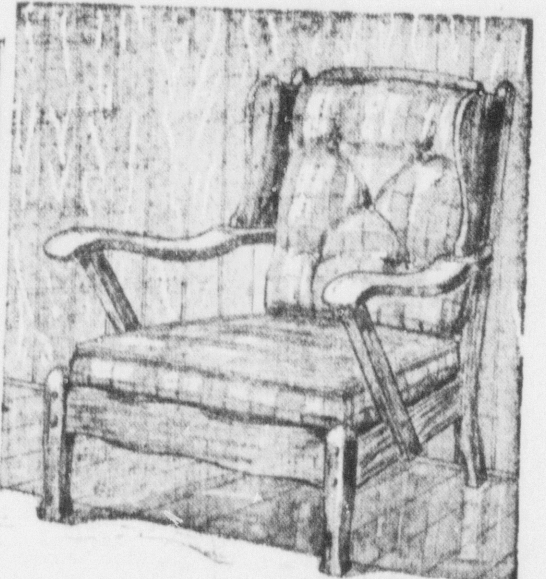

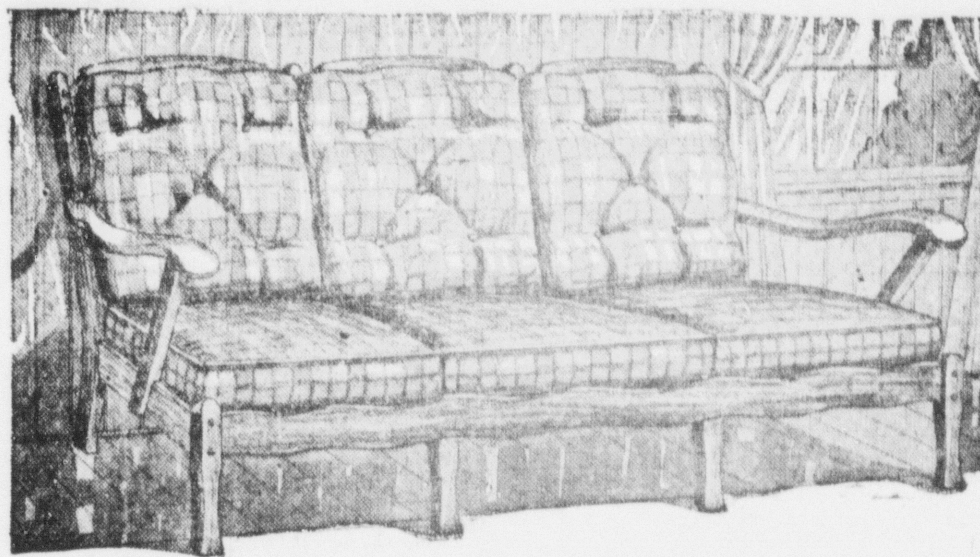

WPA Street of Gold. Denver, Colo.—President Roosevelt has approved a WPA project to spend $129,270 out of the United States treasury to open, drain and grade one and one-tenth miles of West Alameda avenue. Another project calls for further improvement of the same street at a cost of $238,740.

FASHION PARADE

By ORRY-KELLY

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Laces are off to the races!

And when I say laces, I don't mean all-over materials, edgings, or the kind your Aunt Emma crochets. I mean laces — as in shoe-strings. They're trimming, fastening, toning up all kinds of clothes here in Hollywood this summer — and they can be used in such a variety of delightful ways you've certainly got to hear about them.

Starting at the bottom — on shoes — laces have now come up in the world. In fact, they've gotten about as high as they can go, finishing the newest kind of sports hats. As done by Jacqueline Duval and other local milliners, they march up the sides or back of little white pique or linen bonnets which, when the laces are removed, lie flat and can be easily washed and ironed. Another advantage is that the laces can be changed, and each hat comes with several different sets, in a long list of vivid colors to match the trimmings or accessories of sports frocks.

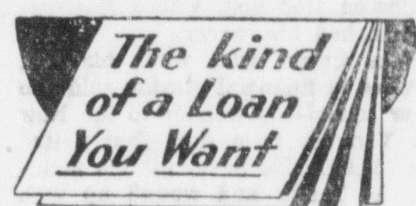

Marion Davies, starring currently in "Cain and Abel," has a suit done in the "schoolboy" motif, with brown leather thongs tying the starched white collar and lacing up the pockets.

Joan Blondell, in "Stage Struck," has a sporty daytime ensemble that has a terribly new look to it, due to an extra flare that comes from the diagonal, full cut of the pockets. Underneath a beige suede jacket is a black jersey frock of slim lines with a zipper down the front, clear to the hem. And the front edges of the flaring jacket, up around the throat, are whipped with leather thongs, while it ties with a couple of "shoe-strings," four inches above the waistline.

Belt and cuffs are still other items that take to laces happily. One of the prettiest summer prints I have done this season went to Jane Bryan, who plays her first screen role in "Way for a Pirate" with Guy Kibbee, Mae Robson and Sybil Jason. In lovely soft shades of violet, green and white, with a round white pique collar, it has a gored skirt, and wide, stiff belt and cuffs laced with white cords. This belt, in passing, is another mode that must be reckoned with. Wider in front, it resembles the wide laced belts of the peasants in European countries, and done in black velvet, leather, or crisply stitched materials, it is having a vogue today on everything from sports to summer evening dresses.

CASEYS DROP INTO THIRD PLACE IN BALL LEAGUE

In the final game of the first-half schedule, the Caseys dropped into third place in the Twilight League standing by losing to the Jefferson A. C., 7-3, on the Landreth diamond. The St. Ann's A. A. team finished in second place.

It was the diminutive "Reds" McCurry who turned in the pitching performance that set back the Caseys. McCurry had trouble in retiring Jimmy Cooper, Billy Hart, and Manager Bud David, but the remainder of the team was duck soup. He allowed eight hits and kept them well scattered.

The loss went to Mel Wright, who was shelled from the peak in the third. The Mules scored four times in the second and a trio of runs in the following frame. Whitaker relieved Wright and succeeded in blanking the Jeffersonians the remainder of the contest.

LEGION JR. TEAM WILL MEET PERKASIE TONIGHT

The American Legion Junior baseball team of the Robert W. Bracken Post is now in first place in the Bucks County Junior League, one full game ahead of Perkaskie and Quakertown.

And riding on the crest of its five-game winning streak, the local team will face one of its strongest Bucks County Legion League opponents, tonight, in the Perkaskie team. The game will be played at Leedom's field. Manager Bob Hems will have Billy Gallagher as pitcher. Al Harr, ace of the Perkaskie staff, is the probable hurling choice for tonight's tilt. Game will start at 6.15 sharp.

"Picture Runner" Makes His Bid

By BURNLEY

He's got rhythm, and to see Gene Venzke run actually gives the rabid track fan an aesthetic thrill, such is the rippling grace of this "picture runner's" smooth, space-eating stride.

As clean-cut and likeable a fellow as you'll meet in a month of Sundays, the Pottstown flyer is always the favorite of the crowd whenever he waits for the starting pistol crack.

Real pandemonium broke loose in New York's Madison Square Garden on that memorable night last winter when the gallant Gene turned the tables on his erstwhile tormenter, Glean Cunningham, and ran that barrel-chested bulldog into the boards with as blistering a stretch kick as you would want to see. The crowd went wild with joy as they acclaimed the long-hoped-for but unexpected victory of the idol of the Eastern track world.

The rhythmic-running Venzke went on to prove that this triumph was no fluke, as he smashed the mile standard to little pieces and made the four-minute mile appear a real possibility.

Once again genial Gene is the reigning king of the indoor boards as he was in that fateful year of 1932 when he unaccountably lost his speed in the all-important Olympic trials and failed even to make the team.

Will history repeat itself in the coming tryouts, and doom Venzke to frustration once again in his desperate bid for Olympic laurels? Gene says no, and there is real determination and inspired confidence in his tone when he tells you that he will positively make the Olympic grade this time.

DANNY M'FAYDEN BACK IN FORM

BOSTON, June 26—(INS)—Danny MacFayden, bespectacled right-hander, is the toast of the Boston Bees.

MacFayden has turned in nearly a dozen victories at this writing—a remarkable achievement when one considers that the "Deacon" could have been had for the asking by any other club not so long ago.

Notable Victories

Among his notable victories was a 1 to 0 win over Paul Dean, Cardinals' ace, a 6 to 4 win over "Lefty" Ed Brandt of the Dodgers, and a 4 to 3 victory over Hal Schumacher of the Glants.

An odd feature of MacFayden's 10 years in the major leagues is that he hooked up with the Bees this season to find that his boss was none other than Bob Quinn, former president of the Boston Red Sox, where MacFayden launched his career.

It was Quinn, who, when his Red Sox were in financial straits, sold the former school-boy wonder to the New York Yankees in a deal that netted some $50,000. He never hit his stride with the Yanks and wound up with the Cincinnati Reds and eventually with the Bees.

MacFayden was the marvel of school boy ranks in the early twenties and a member of that Somerville championship team that also gave Frank Hogan to the major leagues. Hogan caught for the Boston Braves and the New York Glants. His excessive weight was continually against him and he is closing his baseball career in the mid-western minors.

Traynor, Too

Pie Traynor, one of the greatest infielders of all time and present manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, came from the same sandlots that gave MacFayden and Hogan.

MacFayden was unbeatable as a school boy. His record is one of the greatest of all time. When he entered the major league ranks, the old maestro Connie Mack declared the youth had more stuff on the ball than any pitcher he ever knew. However, his lack of weight was continually against him. Today he is the same slim lad, he was 19 years ago. His desire for a good time was another deficit.

However, Danny has corrected the latter, has married and settled down. His closing years as a major leaguer are blossoming into his best and under Bob Quinn, the man who gave him his start.
